Are you filling full yet?

February typically is the fullest time of the year in terms of Caseload/Workload. Not to worry, Spring is also the time to really take a look at your students' progress and the NEED for specially designed instruction from you and possibly consider dismissing students or reducing their time. Remember to always consider the Least Restrictive Environment!

One way to be aware of the student's skill level based on their age is to use current developmental norms or charts.

Technology is a wonderful thing and we are seeing it used more and more in Therapy practices. Specialized Instructional Provides are using computers, tablets, smart phones, smart boards, and more in educational therapy for a variety of purposes.

Just a quick list of cautions:

1. Be Careful of Too Much Screen Time
2. Choose the Target Skill First, Then the Technology
3. Technology is the Therapist's (or Parent's) Tool, Not Their Replacement

There is now good evidence for the therapeutic effects of reading.

Many of us use Literature in our therapy. Whether you are an SLP working on any language goal or a School Psychologist / Social Worker who find fiction can break down social isolation and create a sense of belonging. Or an Occupational therapist, with its holistic approach, can provide a distinct perspective on addressing reading. Sign Language Interpreters have ways to visually enhance the environment of any classroom to support literacy development not only for students who are deaf or hard of hearing, but also for the benefit of all students. By having information displayed visually within the classroom for easy access and to support learning.

We all can be supporting the curriculum with Reading and Writing.

CRA would like to provide you some Free resources of lists of Books, to enhance your therapeutic goal while supporting the curriculum.
